What affected the Fund’s performance?

- Global real estate performed well over the period as the Federal Reserve shifted to an easing stance. Australia, the U.S. and Europe led, while Hong Kong and Mexico lagged most.
- Strong top-down and bottom-up analysis produced broad-based outperformance. Stock selection was especially effective in Canada, Hong Kong, U.S., Japan and Australia.
- Strong outperformance resulted in few detractors during the period, but Singapore was the primary laggard, and a small overweight to Mexico also hindered performance.
