What were the Fund’s costs for the last year?

(based on a hypothetical $10,000 investment)

Class C*	$197	1.84%

How did the Fund perform last year?

- For the 12-month period ended September 30, 2024, the Fund’s Class C shares returned 14.62%.
- In comparison, the Russell 2500® Growth Index (the “Index”) returned 25.20% for the same period.

What affected the Fund’s performance?

- Small- and mid-cap, growth-oriented stocks generally rose during the period due to moderating inflation and positive outlooks as the U.S. Federal Reserve began to cut interest rates.
- Strong stock selection within the industrials sector bolstered returns, as did the Fund’s overweight exposure to certain strong-performing, out-of-Index names in both industrials and communication services.
- Secondary positive contributors to relative performance included positions in certain strong-performing, out-of-Index information technology names, as well as significantly overweight positions in certain outperforming health care holdings.
- Stock selection in the information technology, consumer discretionary and health care sectors detracted from relative returns, as did overweight exposure to certain underperforming information technology names.
- Positioning in the energy and consumer staples sectors — particularly overweight exposure to underperforming, out-of-Index names — also detracted from relative returns.

How did the Fund perform over the past 10 years?

The Fund's past performance is not a good predictor of the Fund's future performance. The graph and table do not reflect the deduction of taxes that a shareholder would pay on fund distributions or redemption of fund shares.
